Anne Duvoisin Fisher received her bachelor's degree cum laude from Duke University in 1973. She then went on to earn an honorary scholarship to the University of North Carolina School of Law, where she received her Juris Doctor in 1978.

Anne has an extensive background litigating a wide variety of case types, including criminal law, medical malpractice, and inverse land condemnation. After joining HensonFuerst in 2003, she went on to found the firm's Land Law Division in 2011, and she now serves as the division's practice leader.

Focusing her practice on land condemnation, land contamination, and related claims, she also serves as an arbitrator and mediator.

Anne was recently appointed as the Chair of the Continuing Legal Education Committee for the Dispute Resolution Section of the North Carolina Bar Association. She was responsible for creating the first mediation continuing education seminar that was approved for credit by both the North Carolina State Bar and the Dispute Resolution Commission. As a frequent lecturer and Co-Chair of the Eminent Domain Subcommittee of the American Bar Association Litigation Committee, Anne teaches other lawyers in continuing education courses and educates the public. She has recently taught courses on hydraulic fracturing (fracking), inverse condemnation, and constitutional law related to regulatory takings.
